Paper Industry Survivor

Can we live without paper?

Today, July 21, 2007, 13 hours ago

How to survive the paper industry kicked off the Paper and Pixel week of discussions at Documenta in Kassel. The first group of talks looked at the way the development of technology is influencing the publishing process and even allows independent magazine editors to survive. They face the threat created by pixels and toners by reinventing content.

Pontiki

Another version of Mr Potato Head

Today, July 20, 2007, 18 hours ago

Pontiki is a construction toy for building models of unusual creatures. They are constructed from colourful plastic components of two different types: a hollow shape dotted with holes, for representing the creatures' bodies, and smaller parts which fit into the holes, for representing features such as and limbs.

The body parts come in four standard shapes, a cube, a cylinder, a cone and an egg. They can be divided into sections and combined with the body parts of other pontiki.

What your Doctor May Not Tell You About - Depression

Learn how to fight depression: Safely & Effectively

If you are afflicted with depression, you know the terrible toll this illness can take on all aspects of your life. But despite the millions of prescriptions that are written each year, costly antidepressants are not always effective and can produce disabling side effects.

Now Dr. Michael Schachter, a leading expert in orthomolecular psychiatry and nutritional medicine, presents a groundbreaking program that has helped thousands find relief naturally, safely, and effectively, often without the use of medication.

In this authoritative, supportive guide, you'll discover:

- How to identify the causes of your depression and where to seek help.
- A proven regimen of safe natural supplements and proper nutrition tailored to your personal needs.
- Tools to determine which treatments work best for you.
- Drug-free methods for controlling the levels of mood-affecting chemicals in your brain.
- How to eliminate depression-inducing toxins from your systems.
- Important lifestyle modifications that really make a difference.

"Impressive...helpful...a most practical guide to recovery." - Richard A. Kunin, M.D., President, Society for Orthomolecular Health Medicine; and Diplomate American Board Of Psychiatry and Neurology.

Gaming sharpens thinking, social skills, and perception

Today, July 19, 2007, 18 hours ago

Researchers now recognize the cognitive benefits of playing video games. A pattern recognition system thinking, even patience. Lurking in this research is the idea that gaming can exercise the mind the way physical activity exercises the body... There is hope for us all.

Everything Is Back Online

Finally Back To My Routine....

Today, July 19, 2007, 18 hours ago

Great. My health and life is back online!

I've managed to clean throughly my computer motherboard, power unit, hard drive, CPU and GPU heatsink and fan with almost 2.5 years stuck with oily thick dirt and dust! Now the computer able to perform better since the CPU temperature as drop from high 79 degress celcius to 55 degrees celcius plus the fan noise also drops. Wow! It take me the whole day. Just like 3 years ago! 😊

Sorry no picture to show how dirty is my rigs. But the below picture from third party source will tell you the whole story.

Learn how to clean PC @ <http://www.yourcomputerlife.com>

Now my site will have daily posting plus improvement with some minor changes to the script to ensure faster excess in coming weeks.

Anyway the internet is getting slow due to increase of users worldwide, spams, viruses and submarine cable repair works still going on.

Lets cut it short, thats all folks, just stay tune.

Palimpsesto

What on earth is that

Tuesday, July 17, 2007, 12:00:45 AM

A sculpture screen made of “dead” light bulbs. Moving spots of light are projected on its surface and as a visitor comes closer to the screen, the light dots gather and re-create the silhouette of the person. The dead light bulbs seem to come to life again. The presence of a public metaphorically gives back their lost splendor to the bulbs.

20 Essential Utilities

Absolutely free!

Monday, July 16, 2007, 12:00:41 AM

For a long time, American Express' slogan was, "Don't leave home without it." Likewise, there are some programs apart from "big" applications such as Word, Outlook or Firefox that we just can't live without. They're too useful, too elegant or just too neat.
